Revised October 2007

American Protestant Correctional Chaplains Association

American Protestant Correctional Chaplains Association

We believe that in this new millennium, unique challenges face our country in the area of restorative justice.

Our much heralded American social breakdowns (in families, schools, neighborhoods, and churches, to name a few) have evidenced themselves in our burgeoning jail and prison populations.

We believe the stereotype of a chaplain sitting in his/her office ministering to the relatively few inmates in the institution must give way to a bold, new, and expanded vision of ministry.

The New Era must include an emphasis on ministry not only to offenders, but also to their families, their victims, and the criminal justice professional.

A full range of ministry must be implemented not only in institutions, but also in the areas of parole, probation, and reentry.

You may ask: How can this expanded vision of ministry be implemented? Can chaplains do all of this?

We can do this only with God's help, by the extension of our ministry through the utilization of qualified and trained volunteers from the community.

Professional chaplains, called by God, educated and experienced, must be in place to recruit, train and supervise a host of volunteers who will bring the Good News of God's love in the entire criminal justice system.

Your new APCCA will be working to inspire and challenge our membership to do all we can to be part of God's plan to reverse the trend toward destruction in America. Will you join us?

APCCA

“Creates interest of a general character in the spiritual, moral, and social services in corrections through which one's heart and mind are directed to God.” (from the original by-laws adopted in Indianapolis, IN, in 1886)

Provides fellowship and worship opportunities for people to engage in Protestant Correctional Chaplaincy.

Facilitates continuing education, interaction, networking and mutual support among American Protestant Correctional Chaplains.

Publishes a newsletter containing information and announcements of interest to chaplains.

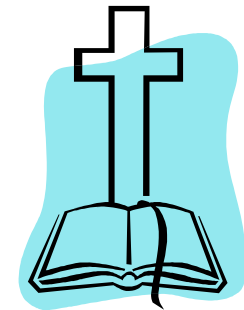

The American Protestant Correctional Chaplains Association (APCCA), established in 1885, is the Protestant subgroup of the American Correctional Chaplains Association (ACCA), and is thereby affiliated with the American Correctional Association (ACA)
